Dear Karen;

Just a quick note to let you know how well your traction table has worked with acute lumbar and thoracic pain management.

The ease of use, without bulky equipment makes it ideal for limited spaces, and the ability to additionally stretch the muscles manually, while the patient is inverted in the prone position is an added benefit.

When the patient is inverted in the supine position and reaching overhead it appears to give great pain relief to the thoracic spine in addition to the lumbar spine.

In short, it has been a great addition to physical therapy aspect of my practice.

Sincerely,

Dr. Ronald A. Robiner
